Sea Brought Safely to Shore.

THREE BODIES RECOVERED

Seven Unaccounted for in Wreck of Glass-Bottom Craft Near Florida.

By The Associated Press

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Dec. 15.—
Four persons lost their lives in the explosion and fire aboard the glass bottom excursion boat Eureka II yesterday, an unofficial check disclosed today. One other person was unaccounted for and 130 of the passengers on the boat who leaped into the sea following the explosion had been brought safely to shore.

Three bodies were brought here and another was reported aboard a disabled fishing craft somewhere south of Miami Beach.

The bodies brought here were those of M. C. Grimm, 60, McCook,
Neb., a passenger; Clarence Vine,
30, Haverhill, Mass., a deck hand, and Mrs. Mamie Sawyer, 45, Miami, whose identity was not established until today.

Skippers of rescue boats, which returned here shortly before noon after an all-night search, reported finding only small bits of wreck age floating on the water in the vicinity of the disaster.

The Eureka II, which was returning from an excursion to the Marine Gardens, sank in more than 20 feet of water after the explosion and resulting fire had forced all to jump into the ocean.

A scene of wild confusion, attended by the shouts of women and children and the music of a three-piece orchestra which tried courageously to stem the panic, was sketched by survivors of the disaster, who testified that the two decks of the 105-foot boat

300 kilometers east of Madrid.

Two other airmen also were re-when the plane fell.

Commander Franco, who recent-his two companions were believed

Earlier in the day, troops had at-

DRIVERS' LAW PETITION HERE

State and Local Auto Clubs Aid in Move for Legislation.

Marion county motorists, who would welcome a state drivers' law to remove irresponsible operators from the highways, are offered an opportunity by the Marion Auto club to help bring about the passage of such a law. Mrs. D. V. Gallagher, secretary, announced today.

The club has a number of petitions which motorists may sign and which, along with similar petitions from other automobile clubs, will be presented to the state legislature at its session in Marion county a quota of signatures is 500. The signatures have already been obtained since the petitions arrived Monday.

The petitions must be returned to headquarters of the Ohio State Automobile Association, by Saturday and Mrs. Gallagher urges all motorists who wish to sign to do so as soon as possible.

Object of the proposed law is to establish a state-wide basis of controlling automobile drivers in the interest of safety. For eight years the state automobile association has attempted to have the legislature pass a similar law, but without success. This year the petitions are being circulated direct to the voter. This means that if the legislature fails to take action, the measure then may be submitted to the voters at the polls.

Mrs. Gallagher pointed out that only voters are eligible to sign their names on the petitions. They must vote in Marion county to sign the local petitions.

The law would make it years the minimum age limit for a driver. Good physical and mental condition also is required. Licenses would be revoked for one year if a driver is convicted of manslaughter or any charge resulting from improper driving.

Have You a Cupboard or Table Not in Use

Who has a table or cupboard that is not just quietly necessary, in fact is in the way? Someone at the compass of the Family Welfare Society knows just where it will do heaps of good? Rooms have been provided for a worthy family and the next problem is to get some furniture to make them liveable.

Stoves, some little bedding and smaller household articles have been provided but many housewife knows the many things necessary to care for even the smallest of families, so it is small wonder that the wife and mother of this little group is just about stumped with the situation. Some item of furniture, dishes, or perhaps something to add a decorative note to the home will help a lot.

FIFTH TO PLAY PART

Georg Fasnacht, Jr., who plays the "Christus" in the Freiburg Passion Play which will be seen in Marion next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, at the Ohio theater, has known since early boyhood that he would be the successor to the role of the "Christus." There are many Fasnacht daughters, but Georg is the only male heir. It was inevitable that Georg would assume the part after he had finished his University studies.

In his childhood days he attended all performances even saw his grandfather play the part. Then he began to participate by assuming one of the small roles. The importance of the parts increased as the years passed and finally he played John, the beloved disciple, when his uncle played the "Christus" and his father played the "King's Daughters." All proceeds accruing to them through these performances will be used for the support of their child's charity bed at the City hospital.

Prisoner in Jail Here Tells Story in Poetry

O. Henry, famous short story writer, started his literary career as an inmate in the Ohio penitentiary years ago, but he has nothing on a Marion county jail prisoner whose bent is toward poetry.

The prisoner in question is R. Kenneth Turner, who will soon start to serve a year in the Ohio penitentiary on three burglary charges to which he pleaded guilty in common pleas court. Turner's initial bit of rhyme was written about his fellow prisoners and himself and it moralizes on crime and its consequences.

Below is printed the poem, with fictitious names substituted for those in Turner's original manuscript.

THE GRAND JURY GANG
BY R. K. Turner

HELLO there, folks, and how do you do. 'Tis the grand jury bunch speaking to you. Here's Joe and Dave, Dud and Tim. They're full 'o that stuff called vigor and vim. Then there's Chuck and Bill Jones, me and the rest. When you need crooks just call on the best. Who are the best? Now why do you ask? Why not give us some difficult task. And if we're not clever in the things that we do, we'll gladly refund your money to you. Then there's a good ole George Johnson, a tough little guy. He tried to forge checks but they didn't get by.

WHY, here's Bill Hoover, the stick-up man. He holds them all up and takes all he can. Is he desperate and mean? Well, you can just bet, for I haven't seen anyone that has equalled him yet.

There's his buddy, Jack Williams, he went for the thrill. But now that he's sentenced, he's had his fill. Take warning from me and don't park with your money, or the thrill bandits will get your watch and your money. Well, for crying out loud! Will you look who's here. It's Big Roy Frank Jackson, who sells whisky and beer. Yes, he's a butcher, and has been up before. This time they pinched him for robbing a store.

WHO, Buck and Jerry? Why, yes they're about. No, wait. I heard a door slam, they might have gone out. No, here they both are happy and well. Buck says it's tough, and

REGINALD DENNY
COMING TO OHIO
IN "WHAT A MAN"

Star's Newest Picture To Show Here Tuesday and Wednesday.

BY HALLIE HOUCK

"WHAT A MAN" is Reginald Denny's latest picture coming to the Ohio Tuesday and Wednesday. Adapted from the novel "The Dark Chapter," Denny has what is termed an engaging personality. You like his smile and the twinkle in his eyes.

Miriam Segal, who plays the lead opposite Denny, made her stage debut at the age of 13 as an "umbrella boy" in a chautauqua circuit presentation of "The Mikado." Her first dramatic part in New York was in "The Squall." Then she was sent to London to play in "Crime" and spent two years there on the stage and in motion pictures.

Little Anita Louise who appears in the picture, was voted by the National Photographers' association convention America's most beautiful child when she was five years old and again when she was 10. She received her education at the Professional Children's school and won a scholarship in the school of the National Association of American Speech. She has appeared in Garbo's "A Woman of Affairs," "Marriage Playground" and other plays in her career of 18 pictures.

JOHN GILBERT HERE
IN A NEW PICTURE; PLAYS SAILOR PART

Marion To Show Latest
Offering of Star; Here
Till Tuesday.

JOHN GILBERT is starred in "Way for a Sailor," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture which opened yesterday at the Marion for a three-day run ending Tuesday night. Wallace Beery also has a prominent part.

This is Gilbert's first picture since "Redemption" and is a wide departure from his usual type of part. He plays as a tramp steamer sailor, ready for a fight or frolic in any port any time.

Gilbert and Beery make up part of the title of shipmates which is rounded out by none other than Jim Tully, hobnob-author, whose first fight with Gilbert in Hollywood occupied considerable headline space.

Lella Hyams, who contributed the romantic interest in "The Big House," in which Beery was starred, is Gilbert's leading lady in the film. Polly Moran and Doris Lloyd round out the cast.

A Slim Summerville comedy, a cartoon and a newsreel complete the program. C. W.

EL BRENDEN TAKES FLIGHT OF FANCY

Just imagine a picture that lives up to its press-agented reputation. It does, though, this picture "Just Imagine" at the Palace tonight and Tuesday. El Brendel, New York in 1930 and Mars are the three big moments in the picture. Marjorie White dishes out the old pun. Maureen O'Sullivan is her sweet shy self and John Garlick and Frank Albertson add to the love interest.

Two men love the same girl. The marriage tribunal, a necessary evil of 1930, gives her to the man she doesn't love, because he has made a name for himself. El Brendel, a golfer struck by lightning in 1930, is brought to life by a scientist and becomes the buddy of the boy she loves.

An eminent scientist has built a rocket plane to fly to Mars. To achieve the success that will make the tribunal reverse its decision, the boy flies the plane, with his buddy helping him, and El as a stowaway. They have a wild time on Mars, where everybody has a twin, and to prove he's been there, El brings home one of the giants. The marriage decision is reversed and the story ends happily. H. H.

WIDOW FILES $25,000 IN SUIT

Asks Damages for Death of Husband in Auto-Truck
Crash in October.

Damages of $25,000 as the result of an automobile collision in which Earl C. Smith was killed are asked by his widow, Lena L. Smith, in a suit filed Saturday in common pleas court against Morris Good, this morning, entering a not guilty plea.

The collision occurred late at night on Oct. 4 when a Dodge sedan owned by Smith and in which he was riding as a passenger struck and crashed into a Chevrolet truck owned by the defendant on the Marion-Prospect road, four miles south of the city.

The truck, according to the plaintiff, was parked diagonally across the road in such a manner that the driver of the Smith car was unable to see the obstruction until too late to apply the brakes. The car crashed into the rear of the truck, causing fatal injuries to Smith, who died half an hour later in the City hospital.

Negligence is charged against the defendant whose machine, according to the plaintiff, either had no rear light or else the latter was covered with dirt and unable to be seen.

The law firm of Mouser, Young & Wiant represents the plaintiff.

Man Pleads Not Guilty to Liquor Charge Here

Ben Houseworth, 47, of 576 East Leaning avenue, is under $1,000 bond awaiting hearing in common pleas court Saturday to wit: Earl C. Smith was killed on his way to work from Tuesday on his second charge of liquor possession and filed Saturday in common pleas court against Morris Good, this morning, entering a not guilty plea.

Houseworth was arrested Saturday night on Oct. 4 when police raided his own owned by Smith and in which he was riding as a passenger struck and crashed into a Chevrolet truck owned by the defendant on the Marion-Prospect road, four miles south of the city.

Daily Proverb—"From those I trust, God guard me; from those I mistrust, I will guard myself."

The farmers of Ontario province in Canada are asking the government to close all its liquor stores during the continuance of the business slump. If at such a time, why not always?

Federal agents raided forty Toledo barrooms and speakeasies and found that all of them had been paying for protection. Naturally. Does anybody imagine that any city's speakeasies could do business without the corruption of the law-enforcement authorities?

The doctors of Chicago have arranged to give free medical service to the unemployed of that city during the coming winter. Splendid! It's a movement which should be emulated in every city of the land.

The federal and provincial governments of Canada have provided work for 84,712 individuals this month, the total not including the provinces of Alberta, Quebec and Saskatchewan. That's hitting unemployment on its sore plexus.

Of 252,085 flights made by navy men during the 1936 fiscal year, only fourteen resulted in fatal injuries, making naval flights for the year 99.9945 per cent. safe. Eighteen persons were killed in the fourteen accidents, while fifteen suffered serious and forty-eight minor injuries. That's almost as safe traveling as used to obtain in horse-and-buggy days.

Professor John Jacob Brooke Morgan, of Chicago, a member of the National Safety Council and co-author of "Strategy of Handling People" was arrested having speeded at the rate of fifty miles an hour and passed fifteen other motorists on Lake Shore drive. When he explained to the court that he was on his way at the time to keep a dinner-speaking engagement on the subject, "Everyday Messages of Successful Men," the court let him off with a fine of three dollars, from which we take it, he used the proper strategy in handling the court.

$123,799,353 for Christmas.

The annual report of treasury department activities for the fiscal year places the amount of war loans owing the United States last November 15 at $123,799,353. It is a figure which should be scrutinized closely; the enormity of the cost of war may become more apparent as a result. The total original indebtedness of other nations to the United States for World War loans was approximately $14,000,000,000.

The grueling business of paying the debt grinds on and on over the protests of the debtor nations, but the United States is determined to collect as much as possible, and rightly. When the people at one end of a residential street get into trouble they hardly would expect a neighbor from the other end to give a fortune to save them and not ask for a return.

The first semi-annual payments for the present fiscal year on the war debts are due today. They amount to $123,799,353. The treasury department is scheduled to receive approximately $236,000,000 in the entire fiscal year to end June 30, 1937. Of this amount, about twenty-two per cent.—$51,500,000—represents repayments of principal and about seventy-eight per cent.—$184,500,000—payments of interest.

Examination of the payments due today reveals that more than ninety per cent. of the total comes from Great Britain, France and Italy, responsible for almost ninety per cent. of the total indebtedness owing the United States.

Great Britain will pay $94,390,000 today and $65,970,000 later. In round numbers, she has paid thus far $1,751,000,000, leaving her indebtedness $4,426,000,000.

France will pay $19,325,000 today and $20,675,000 later. In round numbers, she has paid thus far $446,000,000, leaving her indebtedness $3,865,000,000.

Italy will pay $1,280,625 today and $13,360,625 later. In round numbers, she has paid thus far $83,000,000, leaving an indebtedness of $2,017,000,000.

Other countries on today's paying list are Austria, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Estonia, Finland, Greece, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Roumania and Yugoslavia. Cuba and Liberia already have met their obligations in full. The ex-republic of Armenia owes $18,500,000 that falls in the bad debt column, and Russia owes $309,000,000, of which more than one-third represents accrued interest. No arrangement has been made for paying the Russian debt.

Americans do not relish the position of collector made obligatory on their government by the exigencies of the war period, but it is a situation demanding common sense rather than emotion. Uncle Sam is not a hard creditor—not hard enough, perhaps.

Textbook Fictions of Prejudice.

The country was inclined to smile when Henry Ford was quoted as saying that history was bunk. Mr. Ford may have used the term, but no matter which word he may have used in expressing his estimate of history, his meaning was that history was not reliable. With the passing months and years, it has become evident that his view is not wholly without foundation, and that he might well have gone further and included many works on other subjects.

Dr. Beesie L. Pierce, of the University of Chicago, recently conducted an intensive survey of something like 100 textbooks used in the schools of the United States in the study of history, geography, civics and economics, and as a result of her critical examination, she finds in them great distortion of facts, many absolute misstatements, much prejudice and what, in the light of present-day knowledge, must be taken as proof of ignorance on the part of the writers of some of them.

Contrary to the claims of Mayor Thompson, of Chicago, who waged a campaign on his plan to drive out British textbooks used in the schools of the Windy City, Dr. Pierce finds that Great Britain is generally presented in the textbooks as the traditional enemy of this country and France as America's traditional friend. Germany alone is painted in less-attractive colors than Great Britain. Little attention is paid to Germany till about the time of the World war and then that country is depicted as given to militarism, greed, rapacity and almost unspeakable cruelties.

Dr. Pierce expresses the opinion, possibly it were better to say that she intimates, that the recent campaign of Chicago's mayor on the alleged friendship of the textbooks for England on which his "war against King George" was based, was largely the invention of demagogues, and that the textbook writers seem to be of the few who yet credit the propaganda spread against the German people during the World war, the most of which is now recognized as having been manufactured out of whole cloth for hate-making purposes.

All wars have their horrors and their cruelties, and they are seldom, if ever, confined to one combatant. The outburst of horror over the execution of Edith Cavell as a spy will be recalled. Reference to her death before a firing squad is yet heard from time to time. Yet within five years after the close of the war, English officers frankly admitted that she had been a spy. More than that they admitted that women spies had been executed by the Allies. But we never heard of such executions during the progress of the conflict.

There always has been prejudice in the minds of the people, there always have been and probably always will be prejudices, but neither perversions nor prejudices should be given place in the textbooks used by the school youth of the land. There should be facts, facts presented without coloring or prejudice, for otherwise the trend to the Fordian view will grow and youth will esteem all of them as bunk.

If the research made by Dr. Pierce starts the machinery to bring about the cure of the defects she has found to exist in our textbooks, she will have accomplished a work which should cause honor to be paid to her name throughout the country for all time.

Residents of the Nez Perce big wheat region in Idaho who are away from big timber districts are burning wheat for fuel, wheat, which holds fire about as long as coal, costing but nine dollars a ton, a saving of $7.50 a ton under the price of coal. Not such a bad business proposition at that!

Still in his forties, Commodore Harold Cunningham, after thirty years of life at sea, has resigned as commander of the Leviathan that he may spend more time with his wife and family. It is hinted that he will be succeeded by Captain George Fried, of the America, in which event one brave man and fine commander will be succeeded by another.

Italian officers are not to be permitted to marry without the consent of their commanders until they can demonstrate that their brides are bringing a suitable "dowry," the minimum being $500 for lieutenants and $400 for a captain, while generals are free. Generals over in Italy seem to be held in about the same esteem as they are in Central America, where they are considered as liabilities rather than assets.

After many weeks of mystery, an alleged run-ner has been indicted up in Detroit as the slayer of Radio Announcer Jerry Buckley last July. Maybe the idea in waiting five months to indict a man it is now admitted was suspected from the first was to give him a chance to confess guilt by attempting to make a getaway.

A naval officer, writing in the Navy magazine, criticizes the effeminate blouse, band-door trousers and flat-top cap the men of the navy are compelled to wear, and recommends the adoption of "honest-to-goodness trousers" supported by a belt and a shirt without a draw string as the basis of a new uniform. Any change would be for the better, but the average comic opera will never be the same if the stage sailors are not presented in the present rick.

The election of Heinrich Haberlin, former minister of justice, to the presidency of Switzerland received only a five-line notice in press dispatches. And it's not improbable that the commotion caused over in Switzerland by the campaign was correspondingly limited. It isn't every land where a presidential campaign is permitted to throw business out of joint for months as it does over here.

Germany's board of film censors has ordered "All Quiet on the Western Front" out of the theaters of that country on the ground that it endangered Germany's international standing. That's a bit hard to understand. Considered as individuals, German soldiers were much the same as those of other nations. Toward the close of the war they may have been forced to endure greater hardship and want, but men for men their hopes and fears and sorrows must have been much the same as the soldiers of the Allied nations.

THE REPUBLICAN HAMLET: "THE TIME IS OUT OF JOINT, O CURSED SPITE, THAT EVER I WAS BORN TO SET IT RIGHT"

Editorial Opinion.

THE ACHIEVEMENTS OF WOMEN.

We are pained, we must confess, whenever we read about something like this dinner which Lady Astor gave to thirty-six celebrated women because "I think women had a simply wonderful year. Nearly everything valuable that was done was done by women, and it has not been half recognized—not a quarter recognized, in fact." And the reason for our distaste is not that it awards women too much, but that it awards them too little; it implies that up to a short time ago what they had done that was valuable was nothing. This is so naive, so amusing, so insensible to the whole point of human existence that it utterly flabbergasts us.

When you come to analyze what it means you find it is this: That women had a simply wonderful year at doing things usually done by men. Proof of this can be found in the roster of Lady Astor's guests; they include a lady aviator, a lady scientist, a lady politician, and so on. But for the sex to take pride in this is as silly as for men to take pride in some gentleman who can do embroidery, or another who can nurse sick people, or another who can bake cakes. The gender of those who perform all such services varies from century to century, and from country to country, and matters not at all; the only thing of importance about them is how well they are performed.

There is a realm, to be sure, where men function as men and women as women. But it has very nebulous boundaries and involves such things as manners, taste, dress and general culture. If men are more boorish now than they used to be, then they have slipped back; if women are more informed, better dressed, more urbane in their address, and thus more charming, they have gone ahead. But here we are on ground where ideas differ, and where conclusions can not be drawn by partly checking off the valuable things that have been done, and inviting the thirty-six women who have done them to dinner. Indeed, we are up against an appraisal of civilization itself, and not many are equipped to tackle it.—New York World.

Three Noted Ohio Men.

BY J. H. GALBRAITH.

That the qualities which constitute greatness are inherited is indicated in the histories of three families that gave noted men to the public service in Ohio during the civil war days. It is not generally known that the line of General Ulysses S. Grant traced back to its first representative in America, units with both the lines of Don Carlos Buell and Columbus Delano.

Buell, like Grant, was a native of Ohio, born in Washington county, near Marietta, but Delano was a native of Vermont. He was brought in infancy to Ohio when his parents immigrated to this state early in the last century. Delano was educated by the law and army.

He served the state during the civil war for a time as commissary general, his public services lay, for the most part, in the civil line. Buell was given an appointment to West Point and graduated there with academic standing about the middle of his class. The story of his services in the civil war is almost as well known as that of General Grant. General Grant's ancestry is traced back to Matthew Grant, who arrived at Dorchester, Massachusetts, in 1530 as a Scotch immigrant on the "Mary and John." This is the descent of the Grant line from Matthew to Ulysses. Matthew and Priscilla Grant, maiden name of Priscilla unknown, Samuel and Mary Grant, born Porter; Samuel and Grace Grant, born Miner; Noah and Martha Grant, born Huntington; Noah and Susan Grant, born Delano; Noah and Rachel Grant, born Kelley; Jesse R. and Hannah Grant, born Simpson; Ulysses S. Grant.

Columbus Delano was related by blood to General Grant through General Grant's great grandfather, Susanna Delano, while General Buell's relationship was through General Grant's grandfather's first wife, Rachel Kelley.

Don't Be a "Slave" to Appetite.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

You know lots of friends who are never without what is called "acid stomach," or "heartburn." It is one of the most common of ailments.

It is a sad thing that human nature is just what it is. It is strange how many grown people are slaves to their appetites. If they never eat the foods they know to be bad for them, if they never overeat or indulge at the wrong time, we would rarely hear of acid stomach.

When we are in good health the gastric juice, which has so much to do with good digestion, does not form between meals. Just as soon as we begin to eat, the juice begins to flow. It is getting ready for the digestion of the food when that material reaches the stomach.

At times, for some reason, the natural action of the gastric juice may be disturbed. The acid of that fluid may flow in too large quantities, and this is known as "hyperacidity." At other times it flows in too small quantities. This is called "hypocidity."

The symptoms of hyperacidity vary. The most common are a feeling of fullness and weight in the abdomen, belching of gas and food after eating, headache, and sickness at the stomach.

Nervousness is an important factor in producing this condition. It is most apt to occur when one is tired, overworked, or overexcited. You eat hurriedly, carelessly, or too much, and then heartburn appears.

Many physicians believe that constipation, with its accompanying poisons which are developed in the intestinal tract, have much to do in producing this condition. Digestion is retarded. More acid is developed than is needed to digest a meal. Discomfort follows.

For those troubled with this condition, foods high in flavor and rich in texture should be avoided. Strong seasonings, whole grains and seeds of berries, as well as the fiber of raw or cooked vegetables are too irritating for the sensitive stomach. Such foods should be avoided.

Bland foods, such as eggs, custards, cream and cottage cheese, fine cereals, soups and ice cream, are always acceptable. Fish is easily digested. Some may take meat in small quantities.

Milk in some form should be your protein standby. This may be whole milk, buttermilk, or "acidophilus" milk.

Every person needs plenty of food, as well as variety, to supply all the necessary food values. Do not starve yourself even if you have hyperacidity.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES.

M. C. Q.—How can I get rid of an unsightly growth of hair on my arms?

A.—Bleaching with fresh peroxide of hydrogen will make the hairs less noticeable and is contended by some to retard the hair growth.

C. H. Q.—How can I gain weight?

A.—Proper dieting and deep breathing are the secret. You should eat nourishing foods and have plenty of sleep and rest.

H. H. Q.—What is the cause of excessive perspiration on the forehead?

A.—Excessive perspiration is due to nerve stimulation. You should have treatment for your nervousness.

M. F. H. Q.—What causes black spots to appear before the eyes?

A.—This may be due to biliousness. Correct your diet and avoid poor elimination.

Z. A. H. Q.—What will remove superfluous hair on the face?

2.—How can one gain weight?

A.—For full particulars send a self-addressed stamped envelope and repeat your question.

2.—Improve your health in general and you will gain in weight as well as benefit throughout your system.

A. D. S. Q.—I suffer with almost constant gurgles in the stomach. The bowels seem normal, but I am very nervous and suffer with an itchy skin. I have taken cod liver oil without marked results. What would you advise?

A.—First of all correct your diet. Avoid too many sweets and starches and keep the bowels open. Your nerves probably affect your digestion, and this in turn affects your entire system. For full particulars send a self-addressed stamped envelope and repeat your question.

Dr. Copeland will answer for readers of this paper questions on medicinal hygiene and sanitation subjects that are of general interest. Where the subject of a letter is such that it can not be published in this column Dr. Copeland will, when the question is a proper one, write you personally. If a self-addressed stamped envelope is enclosed, address all inquiries to Dr. Royal S. Copeland, in care of this paper.

Galileo: Champion of Science.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

Galileo was a great astronomer who trembled upon the verge of anticipating some of the greater achievements of Newton. Rejecting the formal methods of the Greeks in the study of nature, Galileo went direct to the fountain source. He had a keen, untrammelled imagination, and he was not content with management for the moment, but he was determined to be concerned with the judgment of posterity.

Writing to that other great astronomer, Kepler, Galileo triumphantly observed: "What would you say if the greatest philosophers here to whom I have offered a thousand times of my own soul to show my studies, but who with the icy destiny of a serpent who has eaten his full have never consented to look at the planets or moon or telescope?"

"Verily, just as serpents close their ears, so do men close their eyes to the light of truth. To such people I have written a kind of book, like the Aeneid, in the Odyssey, where the truth is to be found in the universe or in nature, but I have not said a word, by comparing texts."

The germ of all modern science seems to be found in Galileo. He was truly human in his nature, broad in his interests. Unlike the earlier scientists, who were preoccupied and preferred to keep their discoveries to themselves, Galileo was anxious that his discoveries be made known to the world. His principal desire was to make the truths of science prevail in the world. This he attempted at the University of Pisa, where, because of his skill and extraordinary argumentation, he acquired the name of the "wrangler."

The great battle which Galileo fought with the church and the authority which it represented, has rather obscured the actual contribution he made as a scientist. His early passion for science, against his parents' wishes, is illustrated by the story of his introduction to Euclid.

One day he stopped to listen outside the door of a room where Ostilio Lucel was lecturing on Euclid to his pupils. He remained there fascinated by the geometrical demonstrations, and continued these clandestine lessons, listening outside the door. At last he joined the class, and continued these geometrical studies until forbidden by his father. In the end, the father's objection was overcome, and Galileo embarked upon the twin studies of nature and mathematical analysis.

Familiar to all students of the history of science are Galileo's most spectacular discoveries: the law of falling bodies, the pendulum, the manufacture of telescopes, the discovery of four satellites of Mercury. Not as well known, however, is his discovery of the wonderful principle usually attributed to Newton.

It was a superb generalization, suggested by experiment, it is true, but actually a creation of the mind in the form of a universal principle. In his study of the action of bodies falling down an inclined plane, Galileo had shown that a ball rolling down one plane from a certain height would rebound up another to the same height.

Carrying this discovery to its ultimate consequence, Galileo surmised what would happen if the two planes were flattened out into one. He concluded that a ball once started on its motion and not losing speed by having to ascend vertically would roll on forever, unless stopped by retarding force, such as friction or some other external element.

Thus, it was Galileo who discovered the great and epochal principle of the law of inertia, for the formulation of which Newton has usually been credited.

Galileo will forever stand out in the annals of science as a great champion of the fundamental principles upon which science rests. He was so downright and outspoken that his admirable statement of the superiority of scientific truth over scriptural authority sounds almost naive.

If an apparent conflict arises between the two, Galileo frankly says: "Inasmuch as two truths can not be contrary to each other, it becomes the office of wise expounders to labor till they find how to make the passages of Holy Writ concordant with those conclusions, of which either necessary demonstration or the evidence of our senses have made us sure and certain."—Copyright, 1930, International Feature Service, Inc.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. MINTYRE.

New York, Dec. 15.—Dary of a morning, Harry Early up, making way with a half a dozen yellow tomatoes preserves, and taking to M. J. Foster, the Texas editor, newly returned from France. Thence to a tailor to try on a double-breasted outer coat with the new slant collar.

Home to labor and Chic Sale came and wondered if there were any costume dresses, executing dance steps, who did not finish with the cry: "There is life in the girl yet!" And Chic spoke of a mutual love being as lonely as a horse-fly in a garage.

In the evening to the Belgravia club to dinner and later to a musical play, which, in matter, and sat next to Clara Gould and her wife, the former Lorraine Manville, as was some pretty as any lady I know. Home late re-reading Bennett's "Old Wives Tale."

Harold Ross, editor of the New Yorker, a reputed shudderer at the thought of the press, is known to be a hearty supporter of publicity. His name does not appear in his weekly journal save in the usual complimentary statement required by law.

He was born in Aspen, Colorado, and moved with his parents to Salt Lake, where his father was a railroad contractor of some prominence. Ross had a decisive turn for quitting schools abruptly, and his early career was a series of odd jobs and a moderately pointed suggestion of the future.

He worked on a Salt Lake paper, then on Albuquerque and Needles, filling in at various odd jobs, including a stint as a newspaper editor. He was on Mark Twain's old paper at Marysville, California, and in New Orleans, Atlanta and New York. He for a time edited a paper in San Francisco when the war broke out, and later transferred to Stars and Stripes, the other newspaper. He was a private in the army and refused all offers of promotion. The New Yorker was sinking when he took the helm. He is about thirty-eight years old.

Bill Buck, a blind news-dealer, at Sixty-third and Columbus avenue, is an expert maling change and can detect a counterfeit bill at the first slight touch. Phoney bills are more difficult and it is hard to believe, but so many have been passed on him he refuses to change anything but coins. Nearly all blind news-dealers, including Blind George at Bryant park, have to employ helpers to keep from being imposed upon.

Personal nomination for the most correctly set head of hair on the New York stage—that of Mary Boland.

The only American to receive world acclaim as a bull-fighter is Sydney Franklin, the personable Brooklyn youth. Yet the matador who gave so many bull-fierce toulings must have found his recent home-coming as bitter as worm-wood. His arrival from Spain received only routine notice in the newspapers. He went to the theater and other public places without receiving the faintest recognition. Along Broadway, not a head turned when he passed.

New York has modern gleaners, elderly, well-dressed ladies who prow produce districts in early morning with capacious baskets. They salvage discarded fresh fruits and vegetables from rubbish and sell them to seed dust cafes.

Chorus girls are most frequent of all mores in a quick-change town. They rarely, during a metropolitan run, remain in a hotel for more than three weeks or in an apartment more than a month. Many illustrators could use chorus girls in spare time for posing but they move too much to be traced.

Department store saleswomen have an hour for lunch. One tells me time is spent about as follows: "Twenty minutes for lunch, five for powdering and touching up lips and cheeks and the rest for bathing and powdering and feet."

From a Florida paper: "We often wonder the age of McIntyre, the columnist. We have heard he dresses young and rather flashy, but at times he writes as though terribly old."

THIS week the members of practically all the study clubs of the city have made their roles and periods and entering into the festivities of the holiday season. The weekend will find students returning from school and the next two weeks promise much of interest in social circles.

Members of the Women's Hospital board have again chosen the holiday season for their benefit ball which this year will be held at the University of Nebraska. The Christmas parties and card clubs have already launched well into the Christmas parties while others have substituted the filling of baskets and contributing in other ways to the Christmas giving for less fortunate families of the city. A large number of the clubs and organizations have provided their individual exchange parties with contributions to charity.
